The Fallow Field

Illustrated by Zulma DeLacy Steele
The Fallow Field
To

My Mother:

Whose word-pictures were the inspiration of these drawings,
made in the fields around her home,
this book is lovingly dedicated.

Z. DeL.S.

"Fern Cottage"
Rutland, Vermont.
June 16th, 1898.
THE FALLOW FIELD

The sun comes up and the sun goes down;
The night mist shroudeth the sleeping town;
But if it be dark or if it be day,
If the tempests beat or the breezes play,
Still here on this upland slope I lie,
Looking up to the changeful sky.

Naught am I but a fallow field;
Never a crop my acres yield.
Over the wall at my right hand
Stately and green the corn-blades stand,
And I hear at my left the flying feet
Of the winds that rustle the bending wheat.

Often while yet the morn is red
I list for our master's eager tread.
He smiles at the young corn's towering height,
He knows the wheat is a goodly sight,
But he glances not at the fallow field
Whose idle acres no wealth may yield.

Sometimes the shout of the harvesters
The sleeping pulse of my being stirs,
And as one in a dream I seem to feel
The sweep and the rush of the swinging steel,
Or I catch the sound of the gay refrain
As they heap their wains with the golden grain.

Yet, O my neighbors, be not too proud,
Though on every tongue your praise is loud.
Our mother Nature is kind to me,
And I am beloved by bird and bee,
And never a child that passes by
But turns upon me a grateful eye.

Over my head the skies are blue;
I have my share of the rain and dew;
I bask like you in the summer sun
When the long bright days pass, one by one,
And calm as yours is my sweet repose
Wrapped in the warmth of the winter snows.
For little our loving mother cares
Which the corn or the daisy bears,
Which is rich with the ripening wheat,
Which with the violet's breath is sweet,
Which is red with the clover bloom,
Or which for the wild sweet-fern makes room.

Useless under the summer sky
Year after year men say I lie.
Little they know what strength of mine
I give to the trailing blackberry vine;
Little they know how the wild grape grows,
Or how my life-blood flushes the rose.

Little they think of the cups I fill
For the mosses creeping under the hill;
Little they think of the feast I spread
For the wild wee creatures that must be fed:
Squirrel and butterfly, bird and bee,
And the creeping things that no eye may see.

Lord of the harvest, thou dost know
How the summers and winters go.
Never a ship sails east or west
Laden with treasures at my behest,
Yet my being thrills to the voice of God
When I give my gold to the golden-rod.
The sun comes up and the sun goes down;
The night mist shroudeth the sleeping town.
But if it be dark or if it be day,
If the tempests beat or the breezes play,
Still here on this upland slope I lie,
Looking up to the changeful sky
The sun comes up and the sun goes down.

The night mist shrouds the sleeping town.
Naught am I but a fallow field:
   Never a crop my acres yield.
Over the wall at my right hand
  Slately and green the corn-blades stand.
And I hear at my left the flying feet
Of the winds that rustle the bending wheat.
Naught am I but a fallow field; never a crop my acres yield.
Often while yet the morn is red,
I list for our master's eager tread.
He smiles at the young corn's towering height,
He knows the wheat is a goodly sight.
But he glances not at the fallow field
Whose idle acres no wealth may yield.
He smiles at the young corn's towering height.

He knows the wheat is a goodly sight.
Sometimes the shout of the harvesters
  The sleeping pulse of my being stirs,
And as one in a dream I seem to feel
  The sweep and the rush of the swinging steel,
Or I catch the sound of the gay refrain
  As they heap their wains with the golden grain.
Sometimes the shout of the harvesters
The sleeping pulse of my being stirs
Yet, O my neighbors, be not too proud,
Though on every tongue your praise is loud.
Our mother Nature is kind to me,
And I am beloved by bird and bee.
And never a child that passes by
But turns upon me a grateful eye.
And never a child that passes by
But turns upon me a grateful eye.
Over my head the skies are blue,
I have my share of the rain and dew,
I bask like you in the summer sun
When the long bright days pass, one by one.
And calm as yours is my sweet repose
Wrapped in the warmth of the winter snows.
And calm as yours
is my sweet repose
Wrapped in the warmth
of the winter snows.
For little our loving mother sires
Which the corn or the daisy bears.
Which is rich with the ripening wheat
Which with the violets breath is sweet.
Which is red with the clover bloom.
Or which for the wild sweet fern makes room.
For little our loving mother cares,
Which the corn
or the daisy bears.
Useless under the summer sky
Year after year men say I lie.
Little they know what strength of mine
I give to the trailing blackberry vine.
Little they know how the wild grape grows
Or how my life-blood flushes the rose.
Little they know
what strength of mine
I give to the trailing
blackberry vine.
Little they think of the cups I fill
For the mosses creeping under the hill,
Little they think of the feast I spread
For the wild we creatures that must be fed.
Squirrel and butterfly, bird and bee,
And the creeping things that no eye may see.
Little they think of the feast I spread
For the wild wee creatures that must be fed:
Squirrel and butterfly, bird and bee,
And the creeping things that no eye may see.
Lord of the harvest, thou dost know
How the summers and winters go.
Never a ship sails east or west
 Laden with treasures at my behest.
Yet my being thrills to the voice of God
When I give my gold to the golden-rod.
Ye my being thrills to the voice of God
When I give my gold to the golden-rod.